

Most financial mistakes are not investment mistakes.

They are coordination mistakes. Your CPA, your attorney, your insurance agent, and your advisor are each good at their own work, and almost no one is accountable for how the pieces fit together. The Coordination Review is where that gap gets found, measured, and assigned an owner.

A cancer diagnosis is not treated by one brilliant doctor. It is decided by a room, and one person stays accountable for the whole patient. That is the attending physician.

Wealth borrowed the specialists and forgot the attending. Driftwood is the attending: we charge to coordinate decisions, not to manage a number.

WHAT COORDINATION IS WORTH • ONE WORKED ILLUSTRATION

Each specialist acting alone

≈ $680,000

The same estate, sequenced across all four seats

≈ $285,000

The coordination delta

≈ $395,000

Hypothetical, for illustration, on a composite household with roughly $8,000,000 in assets and an Illinois estate above the state's $4,000,000 exclusion. Not an actual client result. The difference is not a clever trust any attorney could name. It is what surfaces only when the policy, the gifting sequence, the conversion ladder, and the basis decision are made in the right order.

WHAT THE REVIEW EXAMINES

Implementation

Is each asset in the account where it is taxed least?

Tax character

Where is the return quietly leaking?

Ownership

Would your family inherit it the way the documents intend?

Liquidity

Can you reach your money in the year you need it?

Risk & governance

Does one decision quietly create the next problem?

The connections

Who, today, is actually coordinating all of it?

WHAT YOU RECEIVE

The Coordination Report

The written findings: what we observed in each system, the consequence of each, and who owns its resolution.

The Opportunity Register

Every open matter in one standing record, with a status, an owner, and its dependency, so coordination continues after the meeting ends.

Both are yours to keep

And to share with your CPA and estate attorney, whether or not you engage us further.

HOW IT PROCEEDS

01 A fifteen-minute introduction

Nothing to prepare. Together we decide whether a review is warranted. If it isn't, we will say so.

02 The review, privately

Your systems read one at a time, on your actual holdings, documents, and state.

03 Walked through together

With your CPA and attorney where the findings touch their work.
